

Boris Kourdakov

Q: He after the war worked as an officer of the Army.

A: No.

Q: Then, they had him arrested, the father, during Khrushchev's time he disappeared, they shot him.

A: No. (female voice says, No, no, no.)

Q: I'm just proofing what's written in the book. "I was only 4 years old when my father was killed."

A: He died in 1959 and Sergei would have been eight already.

Q: "I understand that my father was simply too powerful for Khrushchev to be allowed to live."

A: No. He had no connections to politics at all, he was a member of a collective farm. He worked as a mechanic during his last days.

Q: Sergei would have looked for his father, he didn't know what happened to him.

A: No, no, no. Nothing like that happened.

Q: Could it not be someone with the same last name?

A: Who?

Q: Well, this Sergei Kourdakov.

A: You see here yourself, it's Sergei.
