

Sergei Kanonenko

Q: He writes that you were with him in the police force, the KGB.

A: How could we be together if he defected?

Q: Before that?

A: Before that? Never, nothing of the kind.

Q: Why does he write this?

A: We chased kids away from hill. Maybe it was that? You know, they watch soccer, and police recruit us cadets to chase people away from hill. That happened.

Q: But you didn't handle other matters?

A: No, nothing else.

Q: Were you going into homes?

A: No.

Q: Did you help the KGB?

A: In a book, f--, it's possible to write anything you want. In my life I can write such books – lots of books like these. Every day I have – you showed up here – and here I already have, f—an occasion, f--, to write something.
