

Victor Yazikov

A: I can say that the caretakers that we had are no longer. It's a generation of our older women, who were very conscientious. They were mothers, which was apparent by their interaction with us. If they had not worried, they wouldn't have been with us from dusk to dusk. And to say such things about one's own mother, then what would you say about him? But as I said, Sergei could not have said such things. I would spit in his face. Without hesitation, if he were to say, "yes, I wrote all of this," I would spit and say, "get out of here before I throw you out the window. He stabbed me in the back or someone else stabbed me on his behalf.